SUPERVISORS OF CENSUS NAMED

President Taft Names 134 More Men For Thirteenth Census.

THEY MUST ESCHEW POLITICS

Beyond Casting Their Ballots, Appointees Must Keep Strictly to Census Work, As Any Political Activity on Their Part Will Be Cause For Immediate Dismissal.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 16 .- In a letter addressed to Secretary Nagel, of the department of commerce and labor, President Taft served notice that any man engaged in the taking of the thirteenth census of the United States who engages in politics in any way will immediately be dismissed from the service. Outside of casting their votes, the president believes that cen- Reulbach, Moran. sus supervisors and enumerators should keep clear of anything that savors of politics, national, state or

Mr. Taft says that in appointing census supervisors it has been found necessary to select men recommended by senators and congressmen in their districts. THREE PRESIDENTS TO MEET, LATEST PLAN

Heads of Cuba and Panama May See Taft at New Orleans.

Washington, Aug. 16 .- Three presidents may meet in New Orleans on Mr. Taft's visit there, about Nov. 1.

Howard Taft, of the United States. There is now talk of inviting the executives of Panama and Cuba, and should they accept, the United States may show them the courtesy of placing a man-of-war at their disposal to bring them to this country and take

It is deemed eminently appropriate by the officials that such a meeting take place, because of the interest this government has manifested in the two republics, and the occasion will afford an opportunity for a personal exchange of felicitations between the three executives, such as are to take place between President Taft and President Diaz at El Paso.

Always use the same terms of command and attract their attention with a light whip or switch, but never use the whip. They do not need it. They are as ready and willing to it is always sure to cause quick sourobey as a well handled team of horses ing. and learn the words of command the same as a dog or any animal.

Some have an idea that an ox team is made to be whipped and yelled at as loudly as possible, but a yoke of cattle can be trained to do their work without noise or bluster. It is all in the driver and their early training. The best ox teamster we ever had made the least noise and used his whip the least. He had a yoke of Devons and would get his load or cart into place as quickly as or even sooner than most of the horse teamsters, and unless one were near and on the watch

Again, in their education careful at tention should be paid to their walk. As this is the only gait they have, it is very important that they should be taught to walk fast. By inclination they will not do this unless educated to it. A careless driver will soon get an ox team in the way of loafing along or in plowing to go so slow as to offset all other advantages claimed for them, so bunch of western lambs for market that a team educated to a fast walk is sheared one-half the number and at much more valuable than a slow team. the end of a week sold them all. can do is governed only by the length of the day. Such a team will be alert, with a show of strength and with a willingness that cannot be excelled by any working team. Again, an ox team are entitled to good care and some grooming. To do their best work they want grain and regular feeding as well as horses. They will also appreciate grooming the same. Many a yoke draws a plow all day without a grain feed or even water at noon and at night is unyoked and turned out in the yard with only a poor feed of hay or grass. This is not fair to the oxen They cannot under such conditions do their best, and then it is said that cattle are no good for farm work, are too slow and cannot begin to do the work of horses. On our hill farms we can hardly do all kinds of farm work with out oxen. When getting up wood and logs in the winter they can be taken into rough wood lots and rough roads covered with deep snow, where it would be impossible and unsafe to use horses. and many of our hillside tillage lands can be plowed to better advantage with oxen. They carry a plow steady and sure and can get over rough ground with as much speed and with more safety to the plow and driver Driving oxen is as much of a sci- And if a team are well kept they are have to be killed, and, again, a well kept yoke will command almost their cost value as beef at any time when they become incapacitated for work

Under the same circumstances a nominal price; so, all things considered, it is my opinion that every farmer can work to good advantage one or more yokes of oxen, depending as to the number, of course, on his farm conditions and the whole number of teams required to do his work.

In going into a new country it is well for the home seeker to learn from reliable sources-the government reports-the rainfall of the new section covering a period of twenty-five or thirty years. Having done this, he should then plan so as to be able to carry on his operations on the basis of the shortest rainfall recorded. This did not satisfy Mrs. Baxter, who dreaded that, in Italy especially, her husband might be kidnaped and held for a ransom.

Mr. Baxter had heard that one of the principal sights of Rome was a visit to the Coliseum by moonlight. One evening while in the Eternal City, when the queen of night was at the full, he proposed to his wife that they go and view the ruin thus illuminated. Mrs. Baxter refused. But he persist-

Leaving his hotel on the Esqualine hill, he strolled down a broad thoroughfare and soon stood on a height overlooking the eastern end of the was surprised to note how immense it looked under the different light. The great pile, or the remaining two-thirds of it, built by slaves 1,900 years ago, where gladiators had fought and Christians had been torn to pieces by wild beasts, rose against the sky like the dark silhoueste of a mountain. Going around to the entrance, Mr. Baxter went within the walls and saw another sight-the moonlight throwing the upper portions of the interior into contrast with the shadowy lower parts. Many visitors were there, but as the hour was late they gradually departed.

Suddenly Mr. Baxter found himself alone. To go out through the main entrance was to increase the distance to his hotel. There were openings all around the oval, but not lighted. Nevertheless the fearless American con cluded to make his exit by one o them. It was very dark under the archway through which he passed, especialty since that at that moment a cloud rolled over the moon. Suddenly he felt some one brush by him and a cloth fly against his face. He had heard that the members of the International League of Pickpockets were then working Rome and were used to covering their victims' faces with a newspaper when robbing them, and it flashed upon Mr. Baxter that he was suffering robbery. Clapping his hand to his pocket, he missed the portemonnaie he usually carried there. Throwing his arms around the person who had passed him, he dragged him back into the arena. There he found that he held a priest.

"Ah, ha!" he cried. "So you thieves resort to the priestly dress to commit your depredations. But you can't fool an American. I'll get my money back or I'll break your back over one of these stone walls."

Then came a volley of words like an explosion of a Gatling gun, but since Mr. Baxter knew only two Italian words, "dove sta" (where is), they produced no effect upon him. He felt all over the man's body to find his portemonnaie, but found only 10 centessimi, or 2 cents. Then, after giving the fellow his opinion of him (in English), telling him that he had been very dexheard running away. Mr. Baxter remembered that, after all, there were only a few five lire bills in the portemonnaie. So he gave the thief a sound drubbing and a final kick and started out of the ruin quite pleased that he had lost none of his youthful strength or courage. The only fear be felt was at a possibility of having to appear in court against the robber. On arriving at his hotel he told his adventure to his wife.

"Why, my dear," said that lady, "I have your pocketbook locked in the

Any one could see by the serious expression of their countenances that the dignity of the Italian realm had been offended. Behind them stood a delicate, intellectual looking priest, wiping scratches on his face and forehead with a bloody hand-
